for the union victories.

In the present week, fifty years ago. Connecticut was jubilant over the bottom side up.

The Times of March 18th contained sweeping victory of Gov. William A.
Euckingham, when he stood for reelection and carried the state with the republican ticket by a majority of over $ 600. Thrilling news from the seat of war was received in the report of the capture of Island No. 10 by Foote's gunplished in the Norwich Aurora, that the prejudicial reports were not well founded. Thrilling news from the seat of war was received in the report of the capture of Island No. 10 by Foote's gunboats and the great battle of Pittsburg Landing, disastrous for the union forces on the first day, when they were driven from their positions back to the river, but turned into a victory on the following day, when with ranks reinforced by the arrival of General reinforced by the arrival of General Grant and two divisions of General Buell's army, the union forces again attacked the rebels and drove them hack over the battleground of the pre-ceding day till the union victory was complete.

An editorial from The Bulletin on election morning, April 7, 1862, was in part as follows: Today the voters of Connecticut are to decide whether they will continue in office that tried and faithful public servant, Gov. William A. Buckingham, or whether they will piace the power in the hands of a man whose patriotism, however much he may have of it, has been carefully hidden away from the eyes of the people. Through all the dark hours of the government's most fearful peril, Governor Buckingham he decoted himself, heart and soul and purse, peril, Governor Buckingham he decoted himself, heart and soul and purse, to the cause of his country, ite has labored unrematingly, day and night, to place the state of Connecticut in that attitude which she owed it to her loyal sons, to her glorious revolutionary memories, to her record of patriotism in days gone by, to assume. It is due to his efforts more than to those of any other man, that sume. It is due to his efforts more than to those of any other man, that the state has so nobly complied with the demands of parriotic duty in this crisis, and is today writing out for horself so glorious a chapter of history. It is for the freemen today to determine whether they will endorse the patriotism, the energy, the faithfulness, of their governor. There is no reason why Governor Buckingham should not be elected by the handsome majority of five thousand votes.
